

Trust Everywhere: from family to capital markets and to the virtual world

Seminar followed by networking drinks

Tuesday 18 February 2025 | 5:00pm – 7:00pm

Just half a century ago, trusts and commerce were two wholly separate subjects. The Courts of Chancery and the Queen's Bench would each operate their own set of laws (occasionally treating each other with light-hearted contempt).

Much has since changed. In 1998, Lord Millett in an extrajudicial article predicted the rise of trusts in the commercial law. He was right. This seminar explores why that is the case, and how practitioners may use trust law to their advantage in commercial planning and litigation.
